

URSULA's Writing Ideas

Aha! Spime for a Toonersism –
I mean, time for a spoonerism!

A spoonerism is a silly word game, where you change the beginning sounds of words around. So butterfly becomes flutter by. Or sleepy time becomes teepy slime. And September becomes Tepseember!

Spoonerisms were named after an English professor, called Spactor Dooner – oops, I mean Doctor Spooner, who apparently used to say things in this mixed-up way all the time.

Imagine your school tuckshop, if all the food for sale was written in spoonerisms. Instead of a tomato sandwich, you could ask for a Somato Tandwich. Or instead of Pie and Chips you could ask for Chie and Pips. And for something sweet, which one would you choose - Canana Bustard, Bocolate Chake, or Jime Lilly?

I know, why don't you make a special menu for your school tuckshop or your favourite place to eat – or even your favourite meal. But write all the delicious things in spoonerisms! Then you could practise ordering what you want!
